Bailout goes to US Senate

$700-B plan: What's in it for Filipinos?

By Cielito F. Habito

ANALYSIS

AS THE US HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES voted against the $700-billion bailout package on Monday, the US stock market fell 777 points, or by 7 percent—a curious confluence of a normally lucky number in a context that is anything but lucky.

Still, hardly anyone believes that the US Congress will not act on some bailout package—the stakes are simply too high, at least for Americans, for US lawmakers to risk inaction.

It may be for this reason that Asian markets, while not spared the market plunge, showed some degree of resilience in the face of the (initial) bailout rejection.

Can Asia, in fact, be largely immune to a possible crash in the US economy?

Approval expected to reverse House vote

WASHINGTON—A REVAMPed US financial rescue plan aimed at restoring market confidence faces a vote by the Senate late on Wednesday, reviving hopes that the lawmakers can turn the tide in the global banking crisis.

The $700-billion bailout plan, which seeks to stem the widening financial crisis that has toppled Wall Street firms and frozen lending among global banks, now dominates the US presidential campaign.

The revised rescue package, which the Senate unanimously agreed to vote on, raised to $250,000 from $100,000 the amount of individual deposits insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (FDIC). The new provision seeks to shore up consumer and business confidence in banks and prevent a run on deposits.

The Senate bill also incorporates legislation granting $112 billion in tax breaks that will benefit 20 million middle-class taxpayers over the next five years.

But the main aim of the new plan remains the same—allow the US Treasury to buy $700 billion worth of toxic mortgage-related assets from banks to unlock credit markets and head off a deeper economic downturn in the United States and abroad.

The revised plan supplants the rescue package assembled by Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson and stunningly thrown out by the House of Representatives on Monday.

The surprise move by Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid and Minority Leader Mitch McConnell to add tax breaks and increased deposit insurance into the revised rescue package appeared likely to win a big vote in the 100-member chamber, which would

3 more miners pulled out alive; 2 bodies found

HAPPY TO be alive and healing at the Baguio General Hospital, miners Jovy Mianyabda, Jose Panin Jr. and Antonio Pagulayan tell stories of their weeklong ordeal underground.

By Elmer Kristian Dauigoy
Inquirer Northern Luzon

ITOGON, BENGUET—RESCUERS YESTERday pulled out alive three more miners trapped in a flooded mine tunnel for nine days. But in a race against time and an approaching tropical storm, the search for others missing later yielded only two additional fatalities.

Rescuers applauded and high-fived each other as the three survivors were carried out on stretchers in the afternoon from two separate locations about 700 feet (200 meters) underground in this mountain township, said George Baywong, a Mines and Geosciences Bureau officer supervising rescue efforts.

Looking pale and emaciated, Gilbert Nawen, Rudy Balig and Mario Amyasan were rushed to the Baguio General Hospital and Medical Center, where they were listed in stable condition and undergoing tests.

But in the evening, the rescuers only found the bodies of Juan, 50, and Rudy, 37, both surnamed Himmayod, bringing to four the number of fatalities. On Sept. 25, the bodies of Joel Balga and Vincent Himmayod were recovered.

Still missing are Joseph Amyasan and Juan and Marvin, both also surnamed Himmayod.

The relationships of the Himmayods were not immediately established.

Six other survivors were rescued on Monday and Tuesday.

BAGUIO CITY—ANTONIO "NIGHT" Pagulayan, 22, survived the flooded underground mine tunnels of Itogon, Benguet, for seven days because he kept his sense of humor.

He swapped stories and jokes with another miner, Jose Panin Jr., 22, to while away the long hours.

The only thing he missed was his bag of betel nuts, locally known as "momma."

Common to Ifugaos, momma is chewed like tobacco to keep miners like Pagulayan alert and less hungry.

Under 'right to reply' bill, politicians will have last say

By Christian V. Esguerra and Gil C. Cabacungan Jr.

A CONGRESSMAN SUPPOSEDLY perennially maligned by the media in his province is gearing up for House plenary debates on his bill proposing penalties for media executives and owners who refuse "equal treatment" of a news subject's reply.

Bacolod Rep. Monico Puentevella yesterday said he was expecting his bill to be passed on third and final reading before the Christmas break. "We need to level the playing field in journalism," he told the Inquirer on the phone.

House Bill No. 3306 seeks to punish the publisher and editor in chief of a publication or the owner and station manager of a broadcast medium if they fail to give equal treatment to a complainant's reply to a specific report. The idea is for the response to be accorded space "equal" to that of the report.

The bill has survived scrutiny at the committee level and quietly found its way into the business of the day. House Majority Leader Arthur Defensor said

Media groups to challenge measure in court

By Alcuin Papa

THE "RIGHT TO REPLY" BILL WILL BE challenged in court by media groups if it is passed by Congress and is signed into law.

Vergel Santos, board chair of the Center for Media Freedom and Responsibility (CMFR), said the measure violated the freedom of the press and of free expression.

"It cannot pass on those grounds. We will take it to court and we will win. It's unconstitutional," he told the Inquirer.

CATHOLIC EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF THE PHILIPPINES

No to the Reproductive Health Bill

Given our position on The Reproductive Health Bill authored by Representatives Edcel Lagman, Janette Garin, Narciso Santiago III and Ana Theresa Hontiveros-Baraquel, we, members of the Catholic Educational Association of the Philippines Board of Directors, representing 1,256 Catholic schools nationwide, hereby affix our signatures to register strong opposition to its passage.

- We stand by the Church as she respectfully signified her strong objection to the contraceptive program the Bill promotes, considering the practices which it shall engender.
- We call the attention of lawmakers to the nature and effects of contraceptives that violate the provisions in the Philippine Constitution on the protection of the life of the unborn from the first moment of fertilization/conception.
- Moreover, the Church also poses serious objections in that this contraceptive program, while supposedly championing the cause of women, ignores instances where women's rights are violated.
- We fault the Department of Health for paying mere "lip service" to Natural Family Planning (NFP). Greater promotion of the more scientific and morally consistent option of the NFP must be done. Both Sacred Scripture and Reason propose that the best form of birth regulation is self-discipline.
- The six years of value-free sex education that the Bill proposes violates the rights of parents to keep watchful guard over the moral education of their children.
- The Church also strongly opposes the use of the term "Reproductive Health" as defined in the proposed Bill since it is made synonymous with abortion packaged as a method of family planning.
- Finally, the proposed Bill as well as the Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2009 is setting aside more than 2 billion pesos from tax payer's money for the purchase of contraceptives. This is money that could instead be used to provide education, livelihood and basic public services.

In view, we commit:

1. to pray for the lawmakers who champion life, as we pray even more for those whom we ask not to look upon the human person as a mere being;
2. to engage ourselves in intensive catechesis on family enshrined in Paul VI's "Humanae Vitae" and John Paul II's "Evangelium Vitae";
3. preserve the integrity of the Christian family and life by promoting programs such as "Subtle Attacks against the Family Explained (SAFE)" the like; and
4. to appreciate "the discipline of the desert" that we may be strengthened to withstand the fleeting attraction offered by a materialistic oriented lifestyle.

We reiterate that we are against the passage of the Reproductive Health Bill.

COINCIDING WITH ITS 22ND anniversary celebration, Cabalen, an eat-all-you-can, eat-all-you-want buffet restaurant, reopens its branch at SM Megamall.

The re-opening is like a homecoming gift from owner and president Maribel Navarro-Ilund who opened its first mall branch at SM Megamall 11 years ago.

Now on the third level bridgeway, the new Cabalen is more modern-looking. The 140-seater restaurant is a mix of the old and new: white and yellow walls and bright lighting give the restaurant a younger appeal while the meadow tiles, glass chandeliers, wall mirrors and wooden furniture lend a Filipino feel to the place, something which Cabalen has been known for.

Shrimp ceviche

PDI LIFESTYLE KITCHEN-TESTED RECIPE

By Nenna Odiamo
Contributor

WE OFTEN THINK of ceviche [illegible]

[illegible]

As part of the recent Mexican food festival at Mandarin Oriental's [illegible] chef Fernando conducted a cooking class on Mexican cuisine [illegible] Acapulco-style ceviche was one of the dishes he demonstrated. It's a simple, [illegible] dish, great for serving as a first course or as part of a buffet spread.

Try this dish at home. It's so easy to do. And because the shrimps have been blanched, you won't have to worry about eating raw seafood.

Shrimp Ceviche Acapulco Style

4-5 servings

[illegible]

For the sauce:

2/3 c tomato ketchup

1/3 c orange juice

1 tsp horseradish

1 medium-size onion, finely chopped

1 large or 2 small tomatoes, finely chopped

1 bunch (about 30 grams) cilantro (wansoy)

3 tbsp olive oil

2 large cloves garlic, chopped

Salt, to taste

Freshly ground black pepper, to taste

To serve:

1 avocado, sliced

Cilantro leaves

Fried tortilla chips

In a medium pot, bring water, salt and cilantro leaves to a rolling boil. Add the peeled shrimps and let boil for just [illegible] seconds or until the shrimps turn pinkish orange. Immediately remove shrimps from the water and transfer to a bowl. Set aside to cool.

Make the sauce: Blend together ketchup, orange juice and horseradish. Add onions, tomatoes and cilantro and mix well. Set aside.

Heat olive oil in a small pan and sauté garlic until it's almost browned. Pour both the garlic and the olive oil into the ketchup-onion mixture and mix well. Season with salt and freshly ground black pepper.

To serve: Divide the sauce equally in 4 to 5 individual serving bowls. Spoon some of the cooked shrimps into each bowl. Garnish with avocado slices and cilantro leaves. Serve with fried tortilla chips.

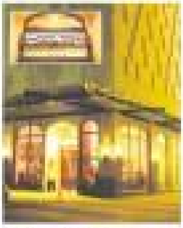

TIPS

- Use a slotted spoon for lifting the shrimps from the boiling water so the liquid drips off.
- Do not overcook the shrimps so they don't get tough.
